WOMEN RUN DOWN BY DRIVER TAKING WRONG SIDE OF ROAD

Mrs. A. Parmisano, of 101 Evergreen avenue, and Mrs. Warren Butman, of 499 Evergreen avenue, met with a painful accident last Tuesday afternoon.

The ladies had just alighted from a No. 18 street car, coming from town, at Templeton avenue and Mission street, when the motorman signaled for them to go across in front of the car. A Chevrolet touring car, driven by Sam Deguara, of Skyline boulevard, Colma, which had come up in back of the street car, passed to the left of the standing street car instead of on the right side, and as the ladies were crossing the street, struck both of them, throwing them to the ground.

The injured women were rushed to St. Luke's hospital, where they were treated for several bad bruises, Mrs. Parmisano having two ligaments in he leg torn, and Mrs. Butman two blood vessels broken in her left leg, while both ladies suffered wrenched backs and were badly bruised all over their bodies. Mrs. Parmisano and Mrs. Butman are both confined to their beds and under the doctor's care.

Deguara was arrested and fined $50 and his license suspended for six months.

JEFFERSON'S TEAM OUTPLAYS POLYTECH

Jefferson Union high school's football team have begun their season's play in a most pleasing manner by defeating the Polytechnic team last Friday, the score being 32 to 0. A large crowd of loyal supporters of the local team were present for the first game of the season, and they were not disappointed in the class displayed by the local high school boys. Expected to have a hard battle, and probably go down to defeat, the local players put up a winning gait from the first, and never were in real danger of being scored on.

The starting lineup consisted of Banfield and Bill Gibbons, ends; Williams and Keithley, tackles; Keagle and Putney, guards; Friend, center; Irons and Markovich, halfbacks; Kennedy, quarterback; Gohl, fullback.

The substitutes were Boynton, Jack Gibbons, Kalinen, Martin, Meadows, and Smith.

CHURCH DECIDES TO ORGANIZE BOYS' CLUB

A meeting of the men at Grace Presbyterian church last Wednesday night, in the interests of forming a men's organization and a boys' club, was addressed by Mr. John Titsworth, boys' work secretary of the San Francisco Young Men's Christian Association, in a very interesting talk on boys' club work. It was decided to organize a Pioneer Boys' Club. A committee of men to have oversight of the work was appointed, consisting of Messrs. William Jacques, A. L. McNair, and Jack Carnegie, with the pastor, Rev. H. D. Chandler, as member ex-officio. It was arranged to give a party for boys next Thursday evening, September 27, at 8 o'clock, with games and good eats as special features, at the church, corner of Evergreen and Hanover streets. All boys interested in forming a boys' club are invited, especially those 12 to 15 years of age.

FORMER RESIDENT PASSES

Mrs. Celia Bracken, beloved wife of the late John Bracken, passed away last Sunday at the home of her daughter in San Francisco. Mrs. Bracken formerly made her home in Daly City, on Mission street, where the family lived for over thirty years. She was the loving mother of Elizabeth T., William J. and Francis Bracken and Mrs. C. E. Peterson; sister of James Malone, and grandmother of Geraldine M. Bracken and Elaine C. Peterson. She was a native of County Galway, Ireland. The funeral was held last Wednesday in San Francisco, and interment was at Holy Cross cemetery.

SPANS FOR SAN MATEO BRIDGE ARRIVE FROM EAST

The 300-foot steel spans to be used in the construction of the San Mateo-Hayward bridge are being assembled at the assembling plant of F. L. Holser in South San Francisco. The knocked-down spans, weighing approximately 3,000 tons, have been received from the Virginia Bridge Company of Roanoke, Va. Eighty men are employed in the assembling of the spans. When the work is completed they will be loaded on barges and floated to Coyote Point.

RECOUNT DEMANDED BY TWO CANDIDATES

Two candidates who went down to defeat in the recent primary election are not satisfied with the returns as reported following the balloting, and have demanded a recount.

Charges of errors in the count of the votes in the First supervisorial district are made in a petition for a recount filed in the Superior Court by Frederick Peterson, of Burlingame, defeated at the primaries in the contest against Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, of South San Francisco.

The official count gave Supervisor Hickey a vote of 3,117, to 2,855 cast for Peterson. In his petition for a recount, Peterson claims that if it had not been for mistakes in the ballot count he would have defeated the incumbent.

The First district includes Daly City, South San Francisco, San Bruno, Burlingame and Visitacion Valley.

San Mateo county election officials threw out 70 votes for Joseph F. O'Malley, of Burlingame, in the count of the August primary, thereby causing the Burlingame candidate to lose the Democratic nomination to Senator M. B. Johnson of Montara, it is alleged in a petition for a recount filed in the Superior Court at Redwood City.

Johnson defeated O'Malley by 65 votes, according to the official count, but election officials were negligent and guilty of misconduct, the petition charges. Had the 70 votes thrown out been counted, O'Malley would have won the nomination by about 5 votes, he estimates.

The petition finds no fault with the count in San Benito and Santa Cruz counties, which, with San Mateo county, make up the Eleventh Senatorial district of the state. Senator Johnson, the winner of the Democratic nomination, is unable to run on the ticket, it is claimed, as he is registered as a Republican. This leaves George C. Cleveland, of Watsonville, Republican nominee, without opposition, unless O'Malley's petition for a recount is sustained.

MISCELLANEOUS SHOWER IN HONOR OF MISS M. WRIGHT

A surprise miscellaneous shower was given in honor of Miss M. Wright, of San Francisco, last Saturday evening, at her future home, 15 Gambetta street. Miss Wright is to become the bride of David Broom some time in October. The bride to be received many beautiful gifts from her friends and the occasion was one long to be remembered by all those present. The interior of the home was beautifully decorated with roses and carnations, and the table was artistically laid with pansies, roses and maidenhair ferns, as well as many delicious delicacies. A large number of friends journeyed from Oakland, and the evening was spent in dancing and music. The outstanding event of the evening was Mr. A. Anderson, who kept the party in screams of laughter with his story telling. Miss Wright was then presented with many beautiful gifts by Mr. J. Souden and Mr. B. Johnson, and dancing was continued until the early hours of the morning, the dance music being supplied by Bill Kelly and his orchestra from San Franicsco. At the closing the guests all expressed themselves as having had a wonderful evening, and the party dispersed, singing "Auld Lang Syne."

"Reports from the stricken district indicate that there is an urgent need for immediate financial assistance," says Mayor Smith, "and the people of this favored section should show their sympathy in a substanital manner. Donations made now to the Red Cross fund will be greatly appreciated by the sufferers in the districts swept by the hurricane, who are in need of food and clothing, and those who have should cheerfully give."

The Bank of Italy, Daly City branch, will accept subscriptions in any amount, large or small, and all who desire to extend aid to the unfortunate victims of this great disaster are urged to go to the Bank of Italy at once and tender their subscriptions.

WINS TWELVE GAMES IN FOURTEEN STARTS

The Daly City Merchants' baseball team won another victory last Sunday, defeating the Infernos team of San Francisco, the score being 9 to 1. This makes twelve victories in fourteen games played by the Merchants this season, a somewhat impressive record, and would indicate that Daly City has a real ball team.

In last Sunday's game the members of the home team clubbed the ball to all corners of the field. B. Strand pitched a steady game for the Merchants, and J. Keane, at third base, came up with two wonderful catches.

Games are being booked with some exceptionally strong teams, and the Daly City fans are promised some real competition in the future. The game next Sunday at 2:30 at the Jefferson Union high school grounds, promises to be the best of the season.

NATIVE SONS TO MAKE DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

El Carmelo Parlor No. 256, Native Sons of the Golden West, has started a membership drive and plans to make this Parlor one of the peppiest in this part of the county. There should be no reason why the younger set of native sons in Daly City should not be proud of their birthplace, California. In addition to sick benefits, this organization is one of Daly City's proudest boasts, due to their loyalty to their town and their pride in having been so fortunate by their birth. Their drum corps and the sister Parlor's drill team have always represented the town in splendid fashion.

Let's see El Carmelo Parlor over the top. Daly City has plenty of native sons whom El Carmelo will welcome into their ranks as brothers.

Solid reinforced concrete piles, instead of the wood and concrete piles, as formerly planned, will hold up the San Francisco bay toll bridge, which is now under construction between San Mateo and Hayward, according to the revised plans presented by Arthur Batty, president of the bridge company, and accepted by the San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday.

FOREST FIRE HAZARD MAY CAUSE CLOSING OF NATIONAL FORESTS

Emergency forest fire conditions and a repetition of the disastrous man-caused brush and timber fires that have swept the state during the past few weeks may necessitate the closing of all national forests in California to public use and travel until the fall rains set in, according to S. B. Show, chief of the California district, United States Forest Service.

"There are two ways of meeting this problem," said Mr. Show. "One is to close the forests and the other is to educate the people. For years the Forest Service, the State Forester and many co-operating agencies have been putting forth great effort in educating and arousing our citizens and forest visitors to an appreciation of the damage wrought by fires, and to teach them to be careful with fire. Smoking has been prohibited in the national forests, annd camp fire permit and shovel and ax regulations enforced. But each year more than 2,000 conflagrations, started by human carelessness and maliciousness, continue to destroy valuable timber, watershed, wild life and recreational resources in the state.

"In the face of such conditions the Forest Service is prepared to take drastic action. On September 10 all national forests in Oregon were closed to public use and travel by the Forest Service and the opening of the hunting season postponed by the governor on account of acute fire conditions. Scattered areas of national forests in California have already been closed to the public this season, but no general closure order has yet been issued, such as was necessary in 1924, when the public was barred from over 12,000,000 acres of federal forests.

"We hope no general closure will be necessary in the national forests of this state, which contain so much of the best hunting and fishing," continued the District Forester, "and a direct appeal is made to sportsmen and forest visitors to guard well their camp fires and to observe the no-smoking restrictions, so that the forests can remain open to free public use."

GUADALAJARA NOW ABLE TO TELEPHONE TO EUROPE

Guadalajara, second largest city in Mexico, was brought within telephone reach of Europe when it was connected with the Bell system's Trans-Atlantic radiophone system on September 1, according to the announcement made by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company. Guadalajara thus becomes the eighth Mexican city to be included in the overseas telephone service, Mexico City, Monterey, Nuevo Laredo, Tampica, Quertaro, Saltillo and San Luis Potosi being linked with the Trans-Atlantic telephone circuit on July 1.

Telephone connections with all Bell system telephones in the United States and Canada were made available to Guadalajara telephone users on July 21. The latest extension enlarges this voice range to include all cities of England, Scotland and Wales, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and to the individual cities of Paris, France; Antwerp and Brussels, Belgium; Copenhagen, Denmark; Oslo, Norway; Malmo, Scotland, and Gothenburg, Sweden. The farthest European city reached by telephone from Guadalajara is Oslo, Norway, about 8,100 miles away.

A STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN

Now that the campaign is warming up, it may be as good a time as any to republish the experience of an Arkansas candidate for sheriff which has been "going the rounds of the press" for several years.

The story has gathered various and sundry additions in its march down the corridors of time, the latest version being as follows:

"Lost four months and 20 days canvassing, lost 1,360 hours of sleep thinking about the election, lost 40 acres of corn and a whole lot of sweet potatoes, lost two front teeth and a lot of hair in personal encounter with an opponent; donated one beef, four shoats and five sheep to barbecues; given away two pairs of suspenders, five calico dressess, five dolls and 13 baby rattlers; kissed 126 babies; kindled 14 kitchen fires; put up eight stoves; cut 14 cords of wood; carried 24 buckets of water; gathered 7 wagon-loads of corn; pulled 475 bundles of fodder; walked 4,060 miles; shook hands 9,080 times; told 10,001 lies and talked enough to make 10,000 volumes; attended 26 revival services; was baptized four times by imersion and twice some other ways; contributed $50 to foreign missions; made love to nine grass widows, and got dog-bit 39 times, and then got defeated."

BETTER FARM LIVING

It is natural that the farmer should think of means for improving his condition in terms of larger crops and higher prices for them. But it is evident that if every farmer raises more and more each year it will mean a surplus of products and consequently lower prcies.

If some of the time devoted to increased crop production were given to providing home comforts and raising more food on the farm, there would be less need for increased acreage of principal crops.

Orchards, gardens, cows, pigs and poultry on every farm would insure more and better home food. Better care of machinery, more attention to general repairs and less waste are measures of economy which many could put into practice with very little expenditure of time or money. Attractive yards, with shrubs and flowers, likewise require little effort and add to the joy of living.

The time and labor required to provide all these things might be spared with little interference with the making of regular crops. There are very few farm families who might not through attention to these matters place themselves in a postion to live better than they do now.—The Successful Farmer.

In order to eliminate the lame duck Congress, why not hold elections on April 1?

4. First prize always went to Herbert when the children played circus with Uncle Benajah's old white mare.

FALSE STATEMENTS MAY CAUSE TROUBLE

The Division of Motor Vehicles has announced its intention of prosecuting any person hereafter caught making false statements on applications for licenses to drive automobiles. This announcement follows the discovery of fraudulent practices employed by unscrupulous individuals and service bureaus to obtain original operators licenses.

Under the present law, all persons applying for a license for the first time are required to submit to an examination. The division has discovered that numerous attempts have been made to dodge this regulation by submitting applications for duplicate licenses. In making such applications, applicants make the false statement that they have been driving for a number of years and have lost or mislaid their licenses.

To stop this practice, all applications for duplicate licenses will be forwarded to the Sacramento office for verification before duplicates are issued.

"FARE, PLEASE"

A scholarly minister, in course of a sermon on our responsibilities in this world, said: "Every day the Lord—and man, too—asks each one of us, 'Fare, please.' Are you so living that you pay your full fare daily? Or are you trying to get a free ride, at the expense of others?" I know some men—and women, also—who scheme to get out of paying their fare. These men usually contrive to do less than they are paid for; or, they are men of more or less wealth who are unproductive loafers, who accept no responsibilities for using either themselves or their means in any helpful way. Not a few women who dodge paying their fare are empty-headed, frivolous, parasites who shirk every obligation. This theme calls for no lengthy moralizing. Rather does it call for frank self-questioning.

"Fare, please."—Forbes Magazine.

WOULD SAVE MANY LIVES

There is a great deal of ice, salt water and rock north of Alaska and Canada; there is more of the same kind in the vicinity of the South Pole. Both poles have been visited. It has been demonstrated that no additional knowledge of practical or scientific value is to be gained by visiting them again. To stop the heavy loss of life among the rescuers who have to start out regularly after polar fliers, we suggest that all newspapers be prohibited to print more than five lines a day concerning all new expeditions into the Arctic or Antarctic wastes. Deprived of publicity, the expeditions would cease automatically and many valuable lives would be saved. This suggested remedy is not copyrighted.—October Sunset.

URGES THE SAVING OF OUR REDWOODS

The Woman's Home Companion has just given splendid publicity to the Save-the-Redwoods movement and the State Park bond issue in California, in a leading editorial. The voters of California are reminded by the magazine of their responsibility in connection with the ramifications of Amendement 4—the State Park bond act—which it is hoped will be used in some part as a help to save redwoods as well as to establish ocean beach, mountain and other parks throughout the state of California. The editorial follows:

"Presidential campaigns unfortunately often obscure important questions that have to be voted upon in various localities at the same election. Typical of such questions is the six million dollar bond issue for state parks which California will decided at the polls in November. This is of genuine national interest, because part of the money would be spent to save the redwood trees along the highway and in the Bull Creek Flat grove. The redwoods, like the Grand Canyon and Niagara Falls, have been the wonder and pride of all America. Although there are some larger trees, in no other place in the world stands a whole forest to compare with the mighty cathedrals made by the redwoods. Axe and saw have taken too many of them already. Even the lumbermen themselves want the despoiling stopped, but it can be done with certainty only by the orderly process of creating park reserves. This is the object of the legislation the approval of which is the responsibility of California citizens alone. The rest of us, who as visitors may have stood breathles with awe in the solemn presence of the redwoods, or who as patriots wish to cherish every great American heritage, can help by contributing to the fund which is being raised by the Save-the-Redwoods League."

ANOTHER CROP SURPLUS

Recent reports indicate that the farmers of the country are faced with another surplus problem, especially with respect to wheat and other grain crops. The total wheat crop is placed at 19,000,000 bushels more than last year and prices are at the lowest level since 1924, due to carry-over of more than a billion bushels in export countries.

The total corn crop is about 250,000,000 bushels greater than that of 1927, with futures excepting September selling at new low points for the year.

After a rise on the strength of the August 1 report, cotton slumped later on favorable weather reports and recent prices ranged around 17 to 19 cents, which will give the average farmer little or no profit.

Potato growers were hard hit this season, due to overproduction, and losses in one potato growing section in Virginia alone are estimated at $3,000,000.

It is certainly refreshing to find a person who is independent enough to think as we do.

Anyway, Mr. Hoover was not rash enough to promise to settle the Muscle Shoals question.

$2,500 REWARD FOR LONE TRAIN BANDIT

A reward of $2,500 has been announced by J. H. Dyer, general manager of the Southern Pacific, for information leading directly to the arrest and conviction of the bandit who held up possengers on the Lark, leaving Los Angeles on September 23. The masked bandit boarded the club car of the coast train and with two automatics took over $800 from the twenty-three passengers in the car. He made a quiet exit from the car as it approached Glendale, and then vanished into the darkness as the train came to a stop. He was described as follows: Age, around 30, height about 5 feet 9 inches, weight about 160 pounds, dressed in dark suit, brown Fedora hat turned down n front, brown shoes. At time of robbery he wore a bluish colored handkerchief as a mask over his face and heavy tortoise shell rimmed glasses.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Plans of the Richfield Oil Company for an improvement program in the Sacramento and Stockton districts, which will involve an expenditure of between $1,125,000 and $1,500,000, were disclosed recently at Sacramento by S. M. Fuller, vice president and general manager of the oil company.

Plans to make the San Francisco Bay area one of the government's leading aviation centers were revealed at San Francisco recently by W. Frank James, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee. Two huge projects, each totaling approximately half a million dollars in preliminary work, were outlined by Congressman James and will be submitted to Congress at its next session.

Forest fires, 70 per cent man-made, may bar the national forests of California to the public. This step toward conservation was regretfully hinted by Major Robert Y. Stuart, head of the United States Forest Service, who arrived in California last week on a tour of inspection. He declared that a material increase in fire hazard would put up the bars against tourists.

The most disastrous fire in the history of Oroville, which threatened for a time the entire business section of the city, swept through a business block last week, leaving a toll of $100,000 damage before being extinguished The flames were brought under control after they had reduced six buildings to smoldering embers and had defied the entire fire department of the city for more than three hours.

Loss by fire at the Kennedy mine, Jackson, is placed at $250,000 Two hundred and fifty men are thrown out of employment. Reports are heard at Jackson concerning incendiarism, as the fire broke out in two places in the log pile. One hundred and twenty men underground escaped through the Argonaut shaft, the bulkhead between the mines having been removed.

If the $13,000,000 naval shore construction bill which will be presented to Congress in December by Representative Britten success—fully passes, a new floating drydock will be added to the navy's equipage in California. Four hundred thousand dollars will be asked for the construction of a floating dock which can be used for destroyers and submarines in the California areas of naval operations. This dock would be designed in such a manner that it could be used anywhere along the California coast.

Distribution of the $27,728.28 fund raised by KFWB radio station at Los Angeles for the capture of William Edward Hickman, now awaiting hanging at San Quentin prison for the murder of Marion Parker, was made last week. Sixty per cent of the fund was awarded to Tom Gurdane and C. L. Lieuallen, the Pendleton, Ore., officers who actually captured Hickman. The remaining 40 per cent was distributed among twelve persons who were found instrumental in identifying the former Kansas City youth.

Oil field operations reported to State Oil and Gas Supervisor R. D. Bush during the week ended September 8 show 37 new wells started, compared with 40 during the previous week. California's total estimated daily crude oil production increased 6,800 barrels during the week ended September 8, figures released by the American Petroleum Institute show. The total estimated daily average crude oil production for the State during the week of the report was 635,800 barrels compared with 629,000 barrels for the week ended September 1.

Gifts to the University of California approximating $30,000 were reported a few days ago at the monthly meeting of the board of regents at San Francisco. The largest individual gift was $10,000 from Miss Ellen B. Scripps of San Diego, for the Scripps Institution of Oceanoraphy, La Jolla. A. P. Gianinni, president of the Bancitaly Corporation, donated $5,000 for the university to bring Professor Giuseppe Caronia of Rome to the Hooper Institute to carrying on researches concerning origin of measles.

In line of duty, State Game Warden George Thompson halted a hunter near Yuba City last week and demanded a license. In response, the hunter levelled his shotgun at Thompson and pumped three charges into his head, according to authorities, killing him instantly. Thompson's body, an unfired revolver clasped in one hand, was found beside his automobile a half hour later. Following footprints which led from the scene, Sheriff Ben Manford of Sutter county entered a nearby ranch house and arrested Charles Hoganboom, 42, son of the ranch owner. Hogaboom, said to be demented was lodged in the detention ward of the local hospital. He confessed, according to authorities, that he shot Thompson when the warden demanded his hunting license.

State Railroad Commission last week refused to allow the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation to cut its rates for street lighting to a figure below cost of production of such current by the municipality owned by Los Angeles Bureau of Light and Power. Denying the corporation's petition for a 25 per cent cut in its street lighting rates, the commission issued an order for a 15 per cent reduction. The order explained that a 25 per cent cut would have brought the tariff below the cost of production of the bureau.

FOR COMPANY LUNCHEON

When you wish to serve a hot soup for luncheon that is easily and quickly prepared, the following will be liked:

Quick Consomme.—Put into a saucepan one quart of boiling water, one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion, the clear liquid from a can of tomatoes, one-half teaspoonful of celery salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt. Bring to the boiling point and simmer ten minutes. Strain, add two beef cubes and two of chicken bouillon which have been dissolved in one cupful of water. Bring again to the boiling point and serve with a thin slice of lemon in each cup. Half a pint of oysters chopped and simmered with the bouillon makes a nice addition.

Cream d Ham.—Scald one and one-half cupfuls of milk with one small slice of onion and one stalk of celery cut into small pieces. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, then add the milk and cook until the sauce is smooth. Add one-half pound of cooked ham cut into uniform pieces and salt and pepper to season. Keep hot until ready to serve.

Chicken Salad With Tomato Jelly.—Strain the juice from a can of tomatoes and put in a saucepan with three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, one tablespoonful of sugar, a bayleaf, two small slices of onion, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, and the leaves from two stalks of celery. Heat and stir until the gelatin is dissolved, then strain through a fine strainer. Put a very thin layer in eight molds holding one-half cupful each, cut five petals from a rosy radish, put a bit of riced egg yolk in the center or chopped nuts; for a stem use a bit of celery stalk, then add a few fine celery leaves. Cover with another layer of gelatin, a layer of cooked chicken and peas. Serve with mayonnaise dressing.

The Child's Food.

With milk, whole wheat bread, graham, or rye—rather than white bread — vegetables and fruits, a child may be kept in perfect health without any meat or gravies. One day with meat in the menu is sufficient during the week. Soft cooked eggs, never fried—may take the place of meat for the day. Fish also is good—for one day.

When the child loses his teeth, serve him with chopped meat or meat loaf, as meat needs good teeth to be well masticated.

Every child likes sweets and the system needs a certain amount of sugar to supply the fuel for the body. Sweets should be given at meal time and after the meal, never before or between meals. Children who are fed pops and chocolate bars or candy in any form, between meals, will not eat or have the appetite for the wholesome food at meal time.

Too much emphasis cannot be made upon the necessity of giving the child daily fresh vegetables and some fresh fruit. Canned vegetables, such as tomatoes, do not lose much of their vitamines in cooking, but most vegetables are much more wholesome when they are eaten fresh. One can usually get some fresh and green vegetable in the market the year around and it is much better to pay a little extra for green food than to give it to the doctor and druggist. Onions, one of the most wholesome of our vegetables, are always available and usually plentiful and reasonable in price.

Coffee and rolls do not make a proper breakfast for a child. Fresh rolls should not be given them at any time, nor should they have tea or coffee. Fruit, cereal, milk and an occasional egg poached or cooked in the shell are a good breakfast for the school child.

Never allow a child to go to school in the morning without eating. Many children have an indifferent appetite in the morning and need to be coaxed or have something different prepared to interest them in eating. Offer a glass of orange juice with a raw egg well beaten in it. If they like milk a glass of milk with an egg and a bit of sugar and a grating of nutmeg. A child should not be scolded when he will not eat. An orange cut in half and given will often coax an appetite when food does not appeal. Orange juice or the whole fruit is not a luxury, for it contains the most valuable mineral salts as well as vitamines necessary for growth. The fruit is gently laxative and is especially good for acid condition of the blood. All citrus fruits, though acid, are alkaline in the reaction in the body.

A LOBSTER JOKE

"How strange people are," said Mr. Lobster. "They only have two legs and they live on land."

The Ones Who Go Fishing.

"How queer they must be," said Mrs. Lobster.

"They're the creatures who travel in ships, they're the ones who go fishing and they're the ones who talk funny words all the time," continued Mr. Lobster.

"They like to eat us, too."

"Horrible creatures!" shrieked Mrs. Lobster. "Why do they want to eat us?"

"Because we're good to eat," said Mr. Lobster.

"Oh, really! That is why so many of the cousins and relatives leave us, is it?"

She was not very old, you see, and she had many things to learn.

"Yes," said Mr. Lobster, "they go to be eaten by the people. But we're a great luxury in most places, that is, we're very expensive, and we're considered a great treat, though there are some places where we're so plentiful that we are quite, quite cheap."

"It is better to be expensive," said Mrs. Lobster. "We wouldn't be so apt to get caught if we were so expensive.

"We might miss being captured because there wasn't enough money to pay for us."

"Ah," said Mr. Lobster, "that may be so, but still if we were cheap and there were plenty of us we might not get caught because they didn't need us."

"I'd rather think of it my own way," said Mrs. Lobster. "Also I like to think of myself as an expensive luxury.

An Expensive Luxury.

"If I thought I were going to be expensive I would not mind so much being caught."

"And we're red when we go on the tables as part of a salad, or all cooked up in a piping hot dish," said Mr. Lobster.

"We're not green after we are captured, and cooked? Is that really so?" asked Mrs. Lobster.

"Really so," said Mr. Lobster. "That's why some people will say when they have very red faces that they are as red as lobsters."

"As green as lobsters would sound more natural to me," said Mrs. Lobster.

"But people can tell the way the wind is blowing and whether a storm is coming by the way they say we have looked, acted, and pointed, so let's fool them this time."

"Yes, let us fool them and have our good joke," agreed Mrs. Lobster.

LEARNED TO SWIM IN EAST RIVER

Kojac Has Made Steady Progress in This Sport.

While New York's contributions to the American Olympic team were not reflected so conspicuously in the winning column of the track events, a young lad who was graduated from one of the city's largest high schools a little more than a year ago brought the metropolis sufficient consolation to make the combined defeats in other fields trivial. George Kojac, who learned to swim in the murky waters surrounding the docks of the East river, gathered in Olympic honors—and not only honors but records.

He stood head and shoulders above the other contenders in the swimming events in the Olympic and he is still in his teens. In the semifinals, Kojac sent the standing record for the 100-meter back stroke, set by James A. House, Jr., of the United States, into the discard and before he finished competition in the event by capturing the championship, he eclipsed his mark again, finishing in 1 minute 8 1-5 seconds. The former standard was 1.10 1-5. Kojac turned in the remarkable time of 1.09 4-5 to startle the aquatic world.

Young Kojac's climb to the peak of the aquatic trail is the result of constant efforts with the Olympic goal staring him in the face as a distant light guides a wanderer home. His first attempts to reap honors in competition were recorded at the Boys' club, then later in high school, then later in national competition and now in the Olympics.

The striking feature of the number of rising champions, of the younger set, is the revelation of their initial start. Georgie Kojac first started to paddle in the oil-filmed water surrounding the piers of New York. His first attempt to stay in water without rubbing the bottom was made in the East river when he was a tot of six years.

He entered competition in the elementary schools and won a medal in the annual championships. That was his first spur. Since then he has been gathering in titles to fit his class and has been an eye-opener by cracking records continually.

Perhaps the greatest triumph of Kojac before his performance at Amsterdam was his defeat of Johnny Weissmuller, champion of the 150-yard back stroke, in Chicago at the national championships on April 8, 1927. Still attending high school, Kojac trekked to Chicago with other teammates for the first time and proved to the aquatic world that Johnny Weissmuller was no longer champion of the 150-yard back stroke. He dethroned the world's tank king of the backstrokers, going a step further to lower the champion's time at 1.42 by two and four-fifths seconds.

Milk-Fed Ball Player Now Ready for Market

Less than $30 worth of milk has helped develop a baseball prospect for the San Francisco Seals who is counted on to bring big money in a major league deal.

When Frank Crossetti, star seventeen-year-old third baseman, signed this year, the club owners thought he was a bit too light for the strenuous Coast League season grind.

Secretary George A. Putnam hit upon the idea of having the youth drink a quart certified milk every day.

A little more than three months later he had gained ten pounds and now is heralded as "a $100,000 prospect."

Outfielder Sumner Most Exceptional Ball Star

This young fellow, Sumner, who is playing in the outfield of the Boston Red Sox, is an exceptional ball player in one respect at least.

He ran out of work playing with some semipros around Boston and one day he walked into the clubhouse of the Red Sox and asked for a tryout. Hundreds of young fellows try this racket at every ball park in the country every summer, but, while many hear the call of the big leagues, few are chosen.

Sumner happens to be one out of the many who got away with it.

Spends Whole Day Trying to End Life

Milwaukee.—One entire day was spent by Adolph Totryk, thirty-five, in killing himself.

Still alive, he tightened two neckties about his neck and strangled himself to death.

MAN IS KEPT IN CELLAR 22 YEARS

Revolting Crime Comes to Light in Lithuania.

Kovno, Lithuania.—One of the most unusual and revolting crimes in the annals of Lithuania has just been unearthed near the little town of Telschi.

In 1906 Josas Lukaschius lived in Telschi with his feeble-minded brother, Jonas; the former owned a small farm, which he decided to sell. He found a suitable purchaser in Jonas Stragauskas, who agreed to take over the feeble-minded brother together with the farm and to care properly for the afflicted man.

But Stragauskas placed the stricken Jonas in chains, weighing 15 kilograms, and fastened the chains to his cellar wall.

For 22 years the mentally deficient Jonas was obliged to wear away his life in this cellar, with no pastime other than counting the links on his crushing chain. During these two decades the prisoner saw no sunshine and breathed only the damp, musty air of the cellar.

The police were notified and Jonas was rescued.

Jonas' body was covered with old scars and fresh wounds, but he was too enfeebled, physically as well as mentally, to move from the spot.

The pitiable prisoner, who had survived this agony for 20 years, knew nothing of the World war, although heavy fighting had occurred between 1914 and 1918 in the vicinity of his ill-fated prison.

Stragauskas was arrested and brought to trial. No witnesses could be found to testify against him and, thanks to the Lithuanian legal code, this left no course open to the court except to sentence Stragauskas to two weeks' imprisonment and a fine of 500 litas.

Former Thief Lends Skill to Good Cause

Atlantic City, N. J.—A shabbily dressed man stepped into police headquarters early the other morning to ask for a place to sleep. He was about fifty years old and looked hungry and apologetic.

No one paid much attention to him. The policemen were too much occupied with a more pressing problem, for they had discovered that the big safe was locked, that some one had left the combination inside. Nobody was able to open the safe, which contained all the records, bail money and evidence needed for the opening of the court.

"Beg pardon, Cap," the intruder said quietly, "I used to be one of the princes of my profession. I can open any safe you show me with nothing but a piece of sandpaper."

He received plenty of attention then. They gave him a piece of sandpaper and he rubbed it on his finger tips to make them sensitive to the fall of the tumblers in the lock. While the policemen crowded close, the shabbily dressed man moved the dial slowly back and forth, a local "Jimmy Valentine" right out of the O. Henry narrative. And like "Jimmy Valentine" he proved his skill as a "safe man."

"It'll open now," he said. "Just turn the handle."

A policeman turned the handle and the safe opened.

"I used to be a world beater at this," the man said, "but I did a ten year stretch in Missouri and I never want to go to jail again."

The policemen provided a big dinner, a place to sleep, a breakfast and saw that he got a job pushing rolling chairs on the boardwalk at $5 a day. They did not give the name of the "Jimmy Valentine" because he had helped them and because he said he was "going straight."

Dog Captures Escaped Convict After Battle

Kingsbury, N. Y.—A collie dog owned by M. C. Grinnell, Kingsbury farmer, earned a $50 reward for the capture of Harold Tyler, who had escaped from the Great Meadow prison, ten miles north of here.

Guards, who had been searching for the convict, sighted him near the Grinnell farm, but he ran into a swamp. As other guards ran up and started to surround the swamp, Tyler crossed it and was making for some woods nearby when he met Grinnell and the dog.

He threatened the farmer and ran into the woods. Grinnell sent the dog in after him. The collie attacked, and although he received several bad cuts from Tyler's pocket knife, succeeded in knocking the man down and holding him until the guards arrived. Tyler's leg was severely bitten.

The prisoner was serving a term of two to six years for robbery. He had not eaten since his escape and was nearly famished.

If every car owner used Champion Spark Plugs there would be fewer traffic jams due to cars stalling.

Champion is the better spark plug because it has an exclusive sillimanite insulator specially treated to withstand the much higher temperatures of the modern high-compression engine. Also a new patented solid copper gasket-seal that remains absolutely gas-tight under high compression. Special analysis electrodes which assure a fixed spark-gap under all driving conditions.

Films Made on Paper

Motion pictures on film or paper are taken with a camera recently introduced in England, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The paper film is projected by reflected light with the aid of two special lamps attached to the outfit and is said to give sharpness and definition on the screen in no way inferior to the film. The camera can be loaded in daylight; the projector shows pictures over 6 feet high and the set is inexpensive.

CONSTITUTION DAY

While Constitution day, September 17, is not a legal holiday, it is observed with appropriate exercises in many schools, and various patriotic societies employe the occasion to renew acquaintances with the provisions of our nation's organic law.

The Constitution of the United States was adopted on September 17, 1787, by the convention appointed in pursuance of a resolution of Congress. Washington presided over the convention, which was composed of fifty-five delegates, representing each of the original thirteen states except Rhode Island, and that body was in session for nearly four months. The final draft of the Constitution was made by Gouveneur Morris, a delegate from Pennsylvania.

Delaware was the first state to ratify the Constitution, which it did on December 7, 1787, and Rhode Island was the last, its date of ratification being May 29, 1790.

The first ten amendments, popularly known as the Bill of Rights, were proposed together, and adopted by the required number of states by December 15, 1791. Only two other amendments were adopted prior to the Civil war, and between 1865 and 1870 three more were added. Since then four additional amendments have been adopted, providing for the income tax, direct election of United States Senators, prohibition and women's suffrage.

The Constitution is one of the world's greatest documents, and every citizen should make himself familiar with its provisions, even though some of them have been sadly disregarded in recent years.

Having the right of way doesn't help much when there's an idiot at the steering wheel of the other car.

OLDEST LIVING THING

There stands in Sequoia National Park in California the oldest living thing in the world, the General Sherman tree, more than 5,000 years old. It is the largest of those redwood trees for which California is famous, and is surrounded by many others of almost equal size and age.

The General Sherman tree is 280 feet high and 36½ feet in diameter at its base. The William McKinley tree is taller, being 290 feet in height, but only 28 feet in diameter. The Abraham Lincoln tree is 270 feet high and 31 feet in diameter.

Some of these trees were already forest giants, ten centuries old, before Abraham fared forth from his native Ur of the Chaldees to found the Hebrew nation. They had withstood the storms of thirty centuries before the birth of Christ. Yet they still stand in sublime majesty, living, growing things, and will live and grow for many centuries to come.

Survivors from the dawn of civilization, awe-inspiring in their stately grandeur, they seem to hold within their massive trunks the mysterious secrets of antiquity.

If one would gain a better realization of how brief is the span of human life, let him consider the General Sheman tree, and contemplate that two hundred generations of men have appeared and passed from the earths' stage since the soil was broken by its first tiny shoot.

They are trying to convict Big Bill Tilden of first degree journalism, but he may get off with a sentence for language-slaughter.

Why doesn't some efficiency expert devise a way to investigate disasters before they happen?

Now that the peace pact is signed, the nations may go ahead with their war plans without exciting suspicion.

What is due the public

THE Bell System recognizes the public requirement for a constantly extending and improving telephone service. Last year 4 million telephones were either put in or moved. The number of local calls not completed on the first attempt was reduced by 5 per cent. The average time for handling toll and long distance calls was reduced from 2 minutes to 1½ minutes.

During the last five years the Bell System spent $1,800,000,000 on additions and improvements of its plant.

There is equally a public requirement for safety of principal and earnings of the stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company—the parent company of the Bell System. Since its incorporation in 1885 it has never missed paying a regular dividend to its stockholders, who now number more than 420,000.

The very nature of the telephone business necessitates a single interconnected system. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company accepts its responsibility for a nation-wide telephone service as a public trust. It is fundamental in the policy of the company that all earnings after regular dividends and a surplus for financial security be used to give more and better service to the public.

THE CHILD AT SCHOOL

With the opening of another school year, the problem of encouraging the child to make the most of the opportunities which the school offers again presents itself. It is a problem in which parents as well as teachers should take a keen interest.

Perahps the most important objective to be sought it to awaken in the child a real desire for knowledge. It should be pointed out that it is posible to derive enjoyment from the pursuit of school studies if one approaches them with a genuine ambition to learn. The child should not be led to feel that going to school is an unpleasant duty. He should be impressed with the fact that it is a privilege to be appreciated, not only as a preparation for after life, but as a means of present happiness and satisfaction as well.

Some children appear to realize this without much urging, but others seem to be naturally averse to mental effort, and require patient handling in order to arouse their interest in school work.

Parents should not place the entire responsibility upon the teachers, but should co-operate with them, not only in insisting upon punctual attendance, but also in leading the child to adopt a proper attitude toward his studies.

THE CURE FOR CRIME

Supreme Court Justice Lewis L. Fawcett, of Brooklyn, New York, has summarized his experience in this way: During eighteen years he had 4,000 cases of youths under 21 years of age charged with various degrees of crime. Only thirteen of these were members of a Sunday school at the time of the commission of the crime.

"A total of 1,092 of these youths were given suspended criminal sentences. Only sixty-two were brought back for violation of the conditions of their parole. In each suspended case the youth was commanded to attend Sunday school.

"In virtually all of the suspended sentences the reform was quick and, I believe, permanent. If we could keep the youths of America in Sunday school during the period of character formation, or at regular attendance upon religious worship, we woulld close the criminal courts and jails. There would be no raw material to work on. And what is good for the youth would be equally good for adults. The sustained, wholesome moral atmosphere imparted by the habitual attendance upon Sunday school and church will expel criminal impulses."

Neither legislation nor punishment can expel criminal impulses and tendencies. Only awakened moral conviction can do this. And the one effective way to arouse moral conviction is to bring people into fellowship with God through definite religious education. The supreme text book for such education is the Bible.

There is no such thing as good citizenship without moral character. Knowledge of God is the foundation. The supreme source of knowledge about God is the Bible. If America is to endure, her children must know the Bible. Men must be like God in character. Our moral responsibility is the profoundest fact of human experience. The religions of the world all bear witness to the moral nature of man.—J. Campbell White, L. L. D., in Forbes Magazine.

BUSINESS MEN'S GIFTS

It has long been the fashion for certain writers and speakers to criticize the American people for their commercialism—their desire to make money.

While it is true that the mere making of money is not a very high ambition, it must be remembered that it is through our genius for business that we have been able to provide the funds for innumerable things worth while, such as are not enjoyed by any other nation in the same degree.

Great sums devoted to educational, religious, charitable and artistic purposes have been made possible through successful business pursuits. Scientific research, the advancement of health measures, better homes, and the comforts and refinment of civilization generally have been due to the ability of our people to acquire money and to their willingness to spend it for these things.

Most of the high-brow critics of business obtained their education at colleges and universities endowed and made possible by business men.

Business and money-making are not the end of our national ambition, but the means whereby civilization may be promoted and preserved.

FIGHT ON DIPHTHERIA

Most encouraging are the results of the fight on diphthera, that much dreaded disease which formerly took such a terrible toll of children's lives, according to a report recently made public by the American Medical Association.

The progress made is strikingly illustrated by the record of Cambridge, Mass., a city of more than 122,000, which had not a single death from diphtheria during 1927. A similar record was made by Duluth, Minn., in 1925.

Before the development of the antitoxin treatment, first employed in 1894, the annual diphtheria death rate was often as high as twelve out of 10,000 persons in some cities. Last year in Spokane, Canton, Syracuse, Trenton, New Haven, Norfolk, El Paso and Grand Rapids, to mention only a few of the larger cities, the rate was less than two out of 10,000.

Not only have modern methods of treatment saved innumerable lives in cases where the disease actually appeared, but through preventive measures and improved sanitation its spread is readily checked, whereas formerly a single infection was often followed by a widespread epidemic.

VALUE OF KEEPING MOVING

Neither a business nor an individual can get on without keeping moving. Standing still brings stagnation. When you get into the bath-tub, you make the water move pretty lively when you want to get the best results. The days are over when one can sit still and wait for business to show up. Business today doesn't show up. It has to be turned up. That is why advertising now plays so vital a part in merchandising.

Advertising goes out, so to speak, and coaxes men and women to become customers. One reason so many old concerns are finding themselves left behind is that they have ceased to go out vigorously after business. Past success usually in dangerous, since it is conducive to laziness, to slowing up, to waiting for orders to come in. The individual may be likened to water in that, while stagnant, nothing worth while can be accomplished, whereas water directed into effective channels can turn dynamos sufficiently to light a whole city. First take pains to make sure you are headed right; then take pains to go full steam ahead.—B. C. Forbes in Forbes Magazine.

CIRCUS PARADE SILENCED TELEPHONES IN ST. PAUL

The telephone service in St Paul was once suspended by a circus parade.

This happened over forty years ago, when the telephone was comparatively new and when St. Paul was served by less than half a dozen operators. Today, 744 operators are required to give service throughout the entire city, which is never interrupted by circus parades.

When the telephone operators heard the circus parade approaching and saw the elephants and listened to the calliope, the attraction proved too much for them and St. Paul subscribers who wanted to make a telephone connection were compelled to wait until the parade was over. One of the operators was Elizabeth E. Good, who has remained in the service since and who is now one of the oldest operators in the Northwest in point of service. Since 1879, she has served as operator, chief operator, superintendant, and now is in charge of all toll lines.

FACTS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE

Transatlantic telephone service has been extended to Malmo, Sweden.

London, England and Prague, the capital of Czechoslovakia, are now connected by telephone.

The state of Vermont has a total of seventy-two telephone companies.

A total of 2,320,000 telephone calls were completed over the Bell lines to points from Connecticut outside the state during 1927.

About 90 per cent of all toll calls in the Bell System are now handled while the subscriber remains at the telephone, as compared with 80 per cent a year ago.

In 1917 there were 53,128 Bell telephones in the state of Louisiana. Now there are more than 125,000, a gain of over 140 per cent in the decade from 1917 to 1927.

Cling peaches worth $50,000 have been harvested in the Chico district this year. This is the largest crop of peaches ever gathered in that vicinity.

California will have revenues totaling approximately $55,000,000 for use on state highway work during the next two years, according to an estimate coming from Sacramento.

GUY BATES POST IN "THE PLAY'S THE THING," AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE

Local lovers of what is best in spoken drama will be glad to hear that internationally famous Guy Bates Post has returned to San Francisco after a world tour ending with a season in London, and will open at the New Capitol Theatre, on Ellis near Market street, San Francisco, Monday night, September 24, in Ferenc Molnar's brilliant and saucy comedy, "The Play's the Thing," which had simultaneous runs in Hungary, Austria, Germany, France, and Great Britain, and proved to be an outstanding success at the Henry Miller Theatre, New York, all last season.

Mr. Post plays only three cities on the Pacific Coast.

O. D. Woodward, director of the tour, has brought from the Henry Miller Theatre, New York, the original stage setting of a medieval castle on the Italian Riviera and has surrounded Mr. Post with members of the original London and New York casts.

Molnar is the author of "Liliom" and "The Swan," and has struck a new note in high comedy. As a literary, dramatic and society event, the presentation for the first time on the Pacific Coast of this fine comedy, with its star and flawless cast, is a notable one.

Mail orders are being received at the Capitol Theatre which indicate, by the names signed to them, that the opening night will see a notable assemblage of prominent persons in society, army, navy, political and literary circles. The engagement is a short one. There will be matinees Wednesday and Saturday afternoons only.

This is the first appearance on the American stage of Mr. Post since his return from Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Great Britain, where he was acclaimed as America's foremost actor. Columns of praise were written about his superb artistry, resonant voice, clear diction and magnetic personality.

MILITARY TELEPHONES IN USE IN AFGHAN WAR

A recent letter to an English paper says that the telephone was used successfully in war within two years after it was invented. In the Afghan war of 1878, the telephone was used in conjunction with the field telegraphs and the heliograph and proved a valuable means of communication. During the great war in France, the Signal Corps of the A. E. F. constructed 1,990 miles of permanent pole line carrying 28,000 miles of wire, put up 3,230 miles of wire on French poles and installed approximatelly 40,000 miles of combat line. About 1,600,000 long distance telephone calls were handled by the Signal Corps, together with local telephone calls estimated at 47,000,000.

Without desiring to appear at all impatient, we can't help wondering when the Literary Digest is going to start the straw voting.

SAME PRESCRIPTION HE WROTE IN 1892

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine, back in 1875, the needs for a laxative were not as great as today. People lived normal lives, ate plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in 1892 under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe bowel stimulant.

This prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative. It has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds, fevers. At your druggist, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

Russia Enrolling Women

Ten thousand Ukrainian Communist girls have joined Red Cross detachments recently, it is reported, and 200 more have finished special sanitary courses and are now "red nurses." This is in response to the government's call for "militarization" of the Soviet population in preparation for the expected attack by "capitalism."

MOST people know this absolute antidote for pain, but are you careful to say Bayer when you buy it? And do you always give a glance to see Bayer on the box—and the word genuine printed in red? It isn't the genuine Bayer Aspirin without it! A drugstore always has Bayer, with the proven directions tucked in every box:

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

"That I cannot say. Colonel Ogilvie was killed in the war and so was Von Schonbrunn. The man who was my secretary in Old Westbury—you remember Edward Conway?—he is dead. Madame de Berlaymont, who was with me in Long Island, she is in prison in England for a long term of years. No, I think I am in no great danger, except from your police."

Lying back in her chair she stared out to sea. Trent wondered what of the past she was trying to capture—or forget. He would have given a great deal to know how much of her heart was filled by the two men she had loved. Probably she was a romantic girl when she met de Beaulieu and married him. The feeling had almost certainly been genuine. And then there was the ex-officer of lancers, Captain Monmouth. Perhaps in the bitterness of finding his pride greater than his love, she had put aside all thought of him.

"There were statements about you in the papers yesterday," she said, after a long interval of silence, "which interested me very much. There was a reference to a certain lady of rank to whom it was said you had been engaged."

"It was true," he said quietly. "Some day I may have the opportunity to tell you of the extraordinary circumstances which took me to her home."

"It was said that she died very suddenly."

"Yes," he said slowly, "that is true. I have never spoken of it before. I have never felt able to. Looking back it seems like a dream. You know what I had been. Well, I was taken into the heart of one of those old, exclusive English families who do not welcome strangers or open their gates to wealth. It was there I felt the agony of being trusted when I was not worthy. One can't fight off love. I tried to, but it was too big for that. I was safe there. I felt like a battered ship which has come unexpectedly into a sheltered harbor. Because I was a guest in such a home none suspected me or even inquired. Yet, my own country folk did, because I did not grace the pages of their social registers. . . . I wonder if anyone will be able to understand me when I say that I was thankful she died before she could find out the life I had led. A score of times I wanted to tell her, but she wouldn't listen. She thought I wanted to confess some conventional indiscretions such as gambling debts. It was not in her heart to believe the man she loved had been a professional thief. I do not mean she was too proud to believe that. Rather it was her love which had cast out all doubt.

"We were to have been married in a few weeks. We were riding together. She was a very daring horsewoman and put her hunter at one of those granite boundary fences they have in Cornwall. She had taken the leap before, but perhaps this was the moment when her beautiful life was marked to end. I am not a religious man, mademoiselle; I have been one who sneered and disbelieved; it was not any fear of hell that made me give up the old ways. It was to keep faith with her."

The woman listening said no word. She could see that to such a silent, reserved man as this the relief of being able to speak of what he had kept hidden was very great.

"And yet I am glad that she died then, for it would have broken her heart to find me out. Her father had great properties in Australia, and we were to have gone there to live. I think he knew there were secrets I dared not tell him. He was a very wise and sad old man. Sometimes I think we might have lived without the shadow falling on us. But this meeting of yours with Pierre Redlich reminds me of what might have been in store. I do not think I could ever have had complete rest of mind. There is a high sense of honor which will not permit itself to be betrayed even by love. I realized that as I went into the church, my head bowed as a mourner, and saw weeping men and women there instead of wedding guests."

He did not speak again until the launch came to its dock.

At the door of the Central Park apartment he left her. "I don't feel like talking to them tonight. You have been very good to listen to me." He pressed her hand and turned away abruptly.

CHAPTER XI

Trent Becomes a Producer.

David More returned to Fort Lee with a list of five houses which might suit his employer.

One of the five seemed to be exactly what Trent required. It was an old frame mansion of sixteen rooms standing in twenty acres of land. The rental was low because the absentee owner had allowed his property to get into a bad condition of repair.

To the west the gardens came to an end on a bluff about twenty feet above the railroad. An iron bridge crossed the tracks from this bluff. There was a flight of steep steps, with a padlocked gate at the bottom which descended to the flat land by the Hudson side.

A feature of the place which seemed to impress Trent was a flower garden, a hundred yards square. In the center of this waste was an old ruined summer house. From this nothing of the house or road could be seen. In front of it was the broad river.

"I Shall Be in the Soup," Trent Confessed.

"I like privacy," Trent told the agent.

"You'll surely get it here," said the man. "You are not overlooked and you've no near neighbors. There's iron gates to keep the crowd out, and there's one of the few outlets to the river which is legally yours to use. I haven't a more desirable property on my lists. If you want to buy I can make you a very low price."

"I might even do that in six months' time," Trent said. The situation was delightful, and he had long been thinking about giving up city life. It would be a pleasing jest to make his home within a few miles of the famous prison.

It was plain the agent was impressed by Trent's way of doing business.

"I'd like to have you in this part of the world," he said. "Take it from me, this side of the river can't be beat for beauty and convenience. As to train service, there isn's such a good one anywheres."

Trent gave him a check to stem the flood of eloquence which was let loose.

"Are you able to leave the store for a couple of weeks, maybe more?" Trent asked More. "I want you to come here and have the place cleaned up. I don't want you to have your family here. You can get what you want at the local stores. Don't encourage tradesmen to call. Is that clear?"

"Absolutely," said More. "I'll keep 'em off, Mr Trent. A little exercise won't hurt me now I'm all rested up."

"I shall be back in a few days. I want you to get here before noon tomorrow."

A quality Trent appreciated in David More was his lack of inquisitiveness. None of the unusual errands upon which Trent had sent him elicited surprise. His not to reason why.

It was three o'clock when Trent stopped before the brown-stone house where Clarke lived.

"Clarke," he said, after a short conversation, "did anybody ever tell you you looked like a cop?"

"It's been a godsend to me," he was told. "I could get through the police lines any time at all just on my face. Having to lick a bunch of cub reporters into shape began it. Why?"

There was a gravity about Trent's manner which he had not before revealed. "Have I ever asked a favor of you?" he demanded.

Clarke looked at him puzzled. Trent had done him innumerable good turns, as this very house proved. He had asked nothing in the way of repayment.

"No, son, you never have, and you could have asked quite a plenty. What's on your mind now?"

Anthony Trent talked to him for ten minutes. Clarke interrupted him now and then with a pertinent question.

"Will I do it?" he said, when Trent finished. "Boy, you know d—n well I will."

"That's a tremendous relief," Trent said gratefully. "When everything is ready I'll phone you and send a car for you. Tell your wife you are touring with me if she seems anxious."

"You've got a hard assignment ahead," Clarke commented, "and there's a raft of difficulties to overcome. Suppose he doesn't come through?"

"I shall be in the soup," Trent confessed. "I'm not disguising the fact that this isn't exactly legal, but I feel we can pull it off. I wouldn't ask you and the others if I thought there was much danger. I'll admit the risk, though."

"He ought to be a tough bird," Clarke commented. "He got away with it all right at the trial."

* * * * * * *

On the face of it, the Weems comedy seemed dead loss. But Trent had ideas concerning pictures which he did not share with his partner. It was to the Fort Lee studio he took his way after dinner. Weems was "shooting" at night, and the six-reel special would also be in course of production.

Trent spoke to the technical director.

"Which of those carpenters you're laying off do you recommend?" He had learned that with the completion of the feature's big sets not so many hands would be required.

"Those four," said the technical director. "Stafford, Clancy, Cleveland and Dale."

When Messrs. Stafford, Clancy, Cleveland and Dale were paid off they secured instantly other positions. They knew Trent had an interest in a production. They presumed he was to be one of the new lights in filmdom. They had seen many such in a heaven where comets and falling stars were common phenomena.

Stafford was the foreman. He was a superior sort of mechanic who aimed at being a technical director some day. There were conditions in this new job which were unusual, but board and lodgings, plus pay, seemed too good to peril with questioning.

* * * * * * *

The Grant house party on his second visit was of a different character, as Anthony Trent recognized. Only Kathryn Holland remained of those who had been there before.

Less attention was given to lingering dinners and more to dancing and tennis. Payson Grant greeted Trent with effusion. He felt rather out of it with the younger men. He had played tennis only to find his wind was gone and his heart fluttering.

La Belle Alliance had been floated off on the highest tide of the year; she was undamaged and now in charge of harbor authorities. Investigation had discovered stolen property of all sorts. Redlich and his companions would not be brought to trial for some time.

One of the problems which perplexed Trent was how to deliver another of Sutton's messages to Grant without attracting suspicion to himself. It was unlikely that Grant would think one of his guests culpable; but there was always the possibility of it.

As before, he was struck with the lavish richness of the house and its appointments. It represented part of the fortune Sutton had amassed and laid at the feet of the woman who betrayed him. A lawyer had told Trent that her position was secure. The gift had been made freely and without compulsion. From the covert looks she continually gave Payson, Trent did not think the second husband was proving any more satisfactory than the first.

Under the steady influence of the stimulants Grant found he could not do without, he was developing a coarseness of face and manner which gave her increasing irritation. Before long she knew she would hate him. There were thorns with her roses.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

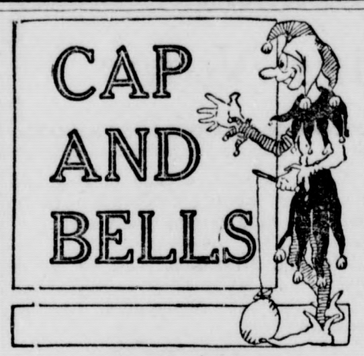
Escape From Danger Makes for Pleasure

To escape from dangers of all kinds we find one of the greatest thrills in life. The small child asks to be chased and squeals with delight as she escapes; small boys skate over thin ice; grown men hazard their fortunes by gambling, and women risk their reputations by reading risque stories—all that they may have the thrill of escaping from something.

The stories of universal appeal, from "Little Red Riding Hood" and "Jack the Giant Killer," up to the highest tragedies, are stories of escape or attempted escape. Even our spiritual struggles are dramatized stories of escape. "The Pilgrim's Progress" is the story of Chrisdan's escape from the City of Destruction, though the interest is sustained by a number of minor escapes, beginning with the Wicket Gate whereon was written "Flee from the wrath to come" and ending with his final escape from the river, which he found deeper or shallower according as his faith grew weaker or stronger.—Thomas Nixon Carver, Harvard Professor of Political Economy, in the Magazine of Business.

Slavery in Wealth

"A successful financier," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "amasses power only to find himself like the genie of the lamp, a slave of the artist and the dreamer."—Washington Star.



DISILLUSIONED

The young man who was inclined to fancy himself as a motor engineer had bought a second-hand car and had just completed one or two urgent repairs.

He stepped back and surveyed his handiwork.

"There," he exclaimed, turning to a friend, "you'd never think she was second-hand now, would you?"

His friend cast a speculative glance over the vehicle before replying.

At last he spoke:

"No," he agreed: "it's more like something you'd made yourself."—Answers, London.

Bad Luck

"Yes," said Mrs. Lackpenny, dramatically, "dear Claude is going to set up in business on his own. He leaves the office next week. He has burnt his bridges."

"Poor dear," said her friend sympathetically, "I do hope they weren't his best ones!"

Pride and Gratitude

"You have reason to be proud of your wife."

"I am proud of Henrietta," answered Mr. Meekton. "And I am also grateful for the fact that her remarkable talents enable her to keep an audience awake half the night, instead of me."—Washington Star.

The Big Stake

"Which would you rather be, a promoter in pugilism or politics?"

"I'd prefer politics," answered Senator Sorghum, "where a man puts up his money liberally and lavishly without nervous expectations of winning anything except the grateful appreciation of posterity."—Washington Star.

THEY USED CLUBS

Jinks—Well, why don't you tell them together, then?

Binks—But I don't want to marry them both.

Any Woman Can Look Stylish

By MAE MARTIN

Most stylish-looking women are just "good managers." They know simple ways to make last season's things conform to this season's styles.

Thousands of them have learned how easily they can transform a dress, or blouse, or coat by the quick magic of home tinting or dyeing. Anyone can do this successfully with true, fadeless Diamond Dyes. The "know-how" is in the dyes. They don't streak or spot like inferior dyes. New, fashionable tints appear like magic right over the out-of-style or faded colors. Only Diamond Dyes produce perfect results. Insist on them and save disappointment.

My new 64-page illustrated book, "Color Craft," gives hundreds of money-saving hints for renewing clothes and draperies. It's Free. Write for it now, to Mae Martin, Dept. E-143, Diamond Dyes, Burlington, Vermont.

Copping

Little Anne with her father, mother and small brother, Dick, drew up to a gas station on one of their travels. Against one wall on a chair tipped back lounged a policeman half asleep.

Dick immediately asked, "Anne, what's he doin'?"

Anne thought for a moment, then answered, "Don't you know what he's doin'?"

On receiving a negative reply from Dick, she continued in a voice so full of scorn that it nearly wilted her small brother with his youthful ignorance, "Can't you see? He's busy copping!"

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

Flamboyant Patriotism Too Often Made Cover for Governmental Misbehavior

By PROF. DAVID S. MUSSEY, Columbia University.

WHITEWASHING national heroes and wrongs of the past to conceal the political rapine and thievery of the present is no way to teach American history to students who have intellects of their own. Too many are using flamboyant patriotism to hide their questionable behavior in government office. Hero worship is being used to divert the American people from genuine patriotism.

I am not worrying about what anyone is thinking of George Washington. Rather, I am concerned with what Washington would think of our people of power today—of the thieves, self-seekers and rascals we have in office. We can't begin to atone for our present-day evils by emphasizing the virtues of our forefathers.

If Washington had been given his choice do you think he would ask that his statue be erected in every public gathering place and building where our national leaders may kneel in adoration before entering their offices to rob the country of millions of dollars?

If we recognized the enormity of our debt to other nations, there would be no nation or flag in the world that we disliked. Aesthetically our flag is not the most beautiful in the world. It is what we read into it that counts. The country right or wrong attitude should not be cherished, but rather we should cherish the conception of a patriotism that demands a right country.

The present educational system seems to have for its object the training of the student to sell some one something he does not want, and not to become a more efficient producer.

Flowing Water Has Become the Most Valuable Servant of Mankind

By F. H. COLLIER, St. Louis Journalist.

Every considerable stream in America is being dammed; and soon we shall burn little except waterfalls for heat or power. Here, truly, is something that is inexhaustible; "so long as grass grows and water runs," the medieval synonym of perpetuity.

The heating of houses on a large scale by an electrical current is near; and then the triumph of domestic life is realizable—pressing a button to make the room warm. Verily, man is monarch and electricity is his servant. Flowing water is its father and a dam is its dam.

Strange, that though simple hydraulics were known to mankind thousands of years ago, that science should now be developed so far beyond its early beginnings. The primary elements are the source of all our strength, fire, water, air and earth. Every century new powers are found in them.

Discoveries are made that seem like necromancy. We may feel that we do not fathom the poet's mind; nor do we, that profit by the inventions of a thousand intellects, fathom the constructive scientific mind. Itself, it is one of the glories of man, mystic, incomprehensible creature that he is.

Use Imagination to Take the Place of Understanding of Higher Things

By GEROME EDWARDS (Unitarian), New York.

All of the higher phases of life require that an abundance of imagination be given in the expression of the original ideal. Consideration of the imaginations work in the development of the mind is getting to be of more and more importance.

Even physical scientists have come to the conclusion that the imagination is an important factor in bringing about physical manifestations, and they have to depend on the higher forms of thought to explain the simplest product of nature. In other words if man would understand the power within the universe and himself, he must rise to the larger viewpoint.

He must relax his contemplation of temporal things. He should not ask to have everything explained to him for his present plane of consciousness. He should be wise enough and open enough to admit that there are things that he does not understand yet; that there are realms of intelligence that he has not as yet touched; that there is a world existing all about him that he can comprehend only through the expansion of his mind. This requires a relinquishment of what we term "the intellectual understanding." Man must let go, at the same time he must take hold.

Parents in Error When Taking Juvenile Abnormalities Too Seriously

By DR. WESTON D. BAILEY, Philadelphia.

Parents often are needlessly distressed over some of the habits they observe in their children. "I'm afraid my little girl is going to become a storyteller," one mother confided. "She's always telling yarns filled with such very convincing details."

Parents should not reprimand children who tell tales of fancy, but cultivate their imaginations. The child lives in a realm of unbridled imagination. To a little girl her doll is a living person. When I was a boy I had a large box filled with spools. I sorted them out by size into regiments and they became living, fighting soldiers. We must realize that the mental atmosphere of a child is entirely different from our own.

Sometimes, however, the actions of children who seem peculiar should be called to the attention of the family physician. These actions may be occasioned by some physical defect, such as diseased tonsils and adenoids.

Chances in Life, Not Bright Lights, Bring Rural Youth to Cities

By DAVID J. MALCOLM, Massachusetts School Superintendent.

The young folk of the rural areas do not migrate to the city because of the lure of the bright lights, but because of the greater economic opportunities offered there.

Young people of the farm look forward to living in the neighborhood in which they were raised, and often look on the life of the city as something to be avoided. However, when it comes to earning a living opportunities for employment are lacking in the country and they turn their feet toward urban areas.

As far as living conditions are concerned, the youth of the farm has most of the advantages formerly enjoyed only by his city cousin and none of the disadvantages which go with heavy traffic, crowded living conditions and artificial recreation.

Rat Wore "Corset"

A rat was caught in a trap during a drive at Hastings, Neb. When the animal was taken from the trap it was noticed that it appeared to be wearing a sort of girdle or corset. Examination showed that while the animal was small it had crawled into a marrow bone and had been unable to shake it off. The hole in the bone was not much over an inch in diameter. As the rat grew the waistline could not develop. It looked much like a wasp.

Payment in Bulk

A furniture dealer of Ash Grove, Kan., A. Galbraith, sold a bedroom suite to Mrs. L. D. Metcalf. After he delivered it, Mrs. Metcalf pointed to a box on the table. In the box were 6,700 cents. Mrs. Metcalf had been saving the copper coins for four years, and had a few to spare after paying Galbraith the 6,700. They had been put up in rolls of fifty each and weighed eighty-four pounds.

A very old woman is always proud of her age and everybody felicitates her upon it.

Adobe Brick Being Restored to Favor

"Adobe," humble, sun-dried brick, was used by Franciscan fathers in the building of their missions, and later many homes and commercial structures were erected with these rudely made bricks.

As the years wore on, however, adobe became primarily the stuff of which ruins were likely to be made. The sight-seeing tourist learned to look for the adobe mission and the adobe house as relics of a romantic past. He scarcely expected to see modern homes built of that material.

Mission-style homes, churches and business blocks long have been popular, but ordinarily these have been built of brick or frame with a coating of stucco.

Lately, however, the old custom of using one's cellar excavation as a source of sun-dried bricks for walls has been revived, and modern small homes and ranchhouses are being built of adobe.

Church Shed Is Passing

The horse shed is disappearing at the country churches in the East. A recent survey shows that they have all fallen into disuse except when used for parking automobiles.

These sheds belong to the generation which considered Sunday morning at church one of the obligations of existence. In those days the whole family was bundled into the two-seated wagon and went to church arrayed in best bib and tucker. Some people lived so far from church that they took their lunch.

There was a time when the horse shed, no matter how poorly constructed, was an absolute necessity. In summer the sheds sheltered the horses from the hot sun. In winter they were used to protect the horse from the cold while its owner and his family listened to a two-hour sermon.

Lasting Paper Money

Paper money may not go as far today as it once did, but it will last longer, observes the Farm Journal, reporting on recent improvements by the treasury which have increased the life of the United States bank note 50 per cent. It is possible now to fold a bill 5,000 times in two directions without separating the fiber.

RIDERS OF BICYCLES MUST OBEY LEWS

The attention of bicycle riders has been called by the Division of Motor Vehicles to the fact that they are required to observe the law on the highways in the same manner as other vehicular traffic. The warning was given because of numerous reports of accidents involving bicycles in which it was determined that the riders had not observed the rules of the road.

Bicycles, it was stated, are expected to keep well to the right side of the road, the same as motor vehicles. Riders msut also give signals when about to turn.

Traffic officers have been instructed to make a particular attempt toward enforcing the law requiring bicycles traveling at night to display lights front and rear.

The female of the species is also more suspicious than the male.

LOST—Last Tuesday afternoon about 4 o'clock, at Templeton avenue and Mission street, at time of accident, a Cameo stone, black onyx, out of a ring. Call Mrs. Warren Butman, 499 Evergreen avenue. Telephone Randolph 6461.
